RISK DISCLOSURE DOCUMENT

This document should be read by each and every prospective client before entering into Commodity Futures trading and should be read in conjunction with regulations of the Pakistan Mercantile Exchange Limited ("PMEX"). PMEX and broker have not passed the merits of participating in this trading segment nor have PMEX and broker passed the adequacy of this risk disclosure document. This brief statement does not disclose all of the risks and other significant aspects of trading. In light of the risks, account holder should undertake such transactions only if he/she understands the nature of futures contracts (and contractual relationship) into which you are entering and the extent of your exposure to risks. Risk of loss in trading in commodity futures contracts can be substantial. You should carefully consider whether trading is appropriate for you in the light of your experience, objectives, financial resources and other relevant circumstances. Futures trading thus require not only the necessary financial resources but also the financial and emotional temperament. In case of any consequence of loss in the future segment; the account holder shall be solely responsible for such loss and the Exchange and broker shall not be responsible for the same and it will not be open for any account holder to take the plea that no adequate disclosure was made or he/she was not explained the full risk involved by the broker. The client will be solely responsible for the consequence and no contract can be rescinded on that account.

Risk Involved in Trading Contracts Effects of "leverage" or "gearing"

The amount of margin is small relative to the value of the commodity futures contracts other transactions are "leverage" or "geared". Commodity future trading, which is conducted with a relatively small amount of margin, provides the possibility of great profits or loss in comparisons with the principle investment amount. But transition in futures carries a high degree of risk. You should therefore completely understand the following statements before actually trading in commodity future contracts and also trade with caution while taking into account one's circumstances, financial resources, etc. If the prices move against you, you may lose a part of or the whole margin equivalent to the principal investment amount relatively short period of time. Moreover, the loss may exceed the original margin amount.

1. Commodity futures trading involve daily settlements of all positions. Every day the open positions are marked to market based on the settlement price. If the settlement price has moved against you, you will be required to deposit the amount of loss (notional) resulting from such movements. This margin will have to be paid within the stipulated time frame, generally before commencement of trading next day.
2. If you failed to deposit mark to market loss and additional margin by the deadline or if an outstanding debt occurring your account, the broker may, without any further notice to the account holder, liquidate a part of, or the whole position, in order to bring the margin to the required level. In this case, Account Holder(s) will be liable for any losses incurred due to such closeouts.
3. Under certain market conditions and investor may find it difficult to impossible to execute transitions. For example, these situations can occur due to factors such as illiquidity i.e. when there are insufficient bids or offers or suspension of trading due to price limit or circuit breakers etc.
4. In order to maintain market stability, the following steps may be adopted: changes in the margin rate, increases in cash margin rate or others. These new measures may be applied to the existing open interests. In such conditions, you will be required to put up additional margin or reduce your position.
5. You must ask your broker to provide the full details of the commodity futures contracts you plan to trade i.e. the contract specification and the associated obligations and ensure that your broker takes no position without your express written authorization if you deem it necessary.

Risk-reducing Order Or Strategies

The placing of certain orders(e.g., "stop-loss" order), which are intended to limit losses to certain amount may not be effective because market conditions may make it impossible to execute such order. Strategies using combinations of positions, such as "spread" positions, may be as risky as taking simple "long" or "short" positions.

Suspension or restriction of trading and pricing relationship

Market conditions (e.g. illiquidity) and /or the operation of rules of certain market (e.g. the suspension of trading in any contract or contrast month because of price limits or "Circuit breakers") may increase the risk of loss due to inability to liquidate/offset positions.

Deposited Cash and Property

You should familiarize yourself with the protection accorded to the money or the other property you deposit particularly in the event of firm insolvency or bankruptcy. The extents to which you may increase recover your money or property may be governed by specific legislation Or local rules. In some jurisdictions, property that has been specifically identifiable as your own will be pro-rated in the same manner as cash for purpose of distribution in the event of shortfall. In case of any dispute with broker, the same is subject to Arbitration as per the regulation of the exchange.

The payments mode is all bank to bank transactions; the broker does not take any responsibility of any sort of cash handling with any of its employee or agent.

Commission and other Charges

Before you begin the trade, you should obtain a clear explanation of all commission, fee and other charges for which you will be liable. These charges will affect your net profit (if any) or increase your loss.

Trading Facilities

The Exchange offers electronic trading facilities, which are computer-based systems for order routing, execution, matching, registration or clearing of trades. As with all facilities and systems, they are vulnerable to temporary disruption or failure. Your ability to recover certain losses may be subject to limits on liability imposed by the system provider, the market, the clearing house and/or Broker firms. Such limits may vary; you should ask the firm with which you deal for details in this respect. This document does not disclose all of the risks and other significant aspects involved in trading on a Futures market. The Client should therefore study Futures trading carefully before becoming involved in it. I hereby acknowledge that I have received and understood this risk disclosure statement
